HERE IS A MYSTERY

On Sunday night Oscar Orlopp, the 17-year-old son of Paul Orlopp, 135 Western avenue, Paul Orlopp, 135 Western avenue, and Noel Gregory, a chum, were seining minnows on a sandbar near the Rock Island Bridge. They reported that they saw a man walk out on the Rock Island bridge and drag a dark object to the middle of the bridge and then pitch the object into the river. The boys thought that a man had been thrown into the river and they hastened home. Paul Orlopp, the father, telephoned to the police but it was dark and so nothing was done about the matter.

Now the engineers at the Topeka, Fowler and Wear sand dips are livin constant fear that they will pick this man up in a dip hole. A year or more ago the body of a boy who drowned up the river was picked up by one of the huge sand dippers and ever since that time the operators have been afraid that they will repeat the gruesome act.

As yet no trace of the man who is supposed to have been thrown into the river has been found. The boys stoutly maintain, however, that it was a man and not a dog or package of any kind.
